Public insurance adjusters help homeowners navigate the claims process and get higher settlements after disasters

Foster City, CA – September 9, 2021 – To help people navigate the home insurance claims process, Insure.com releases a report outlining the benefits of hiring a public insurance adjuster—a professional who can act as an intermediary between homeowners and the insurers.

“After a natural disaster, homeowners have a lot on their plate as they deal with the catastrophic damage to their homes,” notes Les Masterson, managing editor for Insure. “Public insurance adjusters can help people get a higher settlement from their insurance company and save valuable time on their home insurance claims.”

Insure’s report, Public insurance adjuster: Why you should hire one, outlines the benefits of working with a public insurance adjuster and the services these professionals provide, including helping homeowners:

- Understand the legal language in their policies
- Work through the complicated process of filing a claim
- Track phone calls with the insurance company
- Save time by attending meetings on their behalf
- Find temporary living arrangements if the home is uninhabitable

For these services, public home insurance adjusters charge 15% of the total claim settlement.

Insure provides information on how to research and hire a good public insurance adjuster and understand the contracts involved with their services. There is information about the difference between a public insurance adjuster and an independent adjuster, which is a direct agent of an insurance company.

Masterson is available to comment on this guide and answer questions about how homeowners can find the best insurance companies to meet their needs.
